Spock

1985, Radio, English

Leonard Nimoy: You might call me a world traveler and indeed I've explored new worlds where no man has gone before. I've voyaged far into the future and I've seen a world you can only imagine. It is a world without forests; barren and scorched, bereft of life. A world devoured by flames; flames from a senseless match or a thoughtless campfire. It is a world without hope and I can only hope that you'll be smart enough to prevent this vast wasteland because the forests belong in your future. They belong to your children and they belong on this earth. So, be smart and careful, aware and alert; that's really the only logical solution. And I should know, I'm Leonard Nimoy and only you can prevent forest fires.

Speaker: A public service of the Forest Service, U.S.D.A., your State Foresters, and the Ad Council.
